

On January 15, 2018, a woman (66 years old) without a ticket and passport slipped through airport security and took a flight from Chicago to London. The woman entered Chicago O’Hare International Airport on January 14. First, she hid her face with her hair and passed two Transportation Security Administration officers who were controlling other passenger’s boarding passes. After she was screened, she wanted to board a flight to Connecticut but failed. When the woman tried to sneak past the gate agent, she was stopped and directed to sit down. She stayed overnight at the airport and rode a shuttle bus to the international gate the next day, even though a passport and plane ticket are required to board the shuttle. She then entered a plane to Heathrow Airport (London), where she was detained by British customs officials. She arrived back in the United States on January 18. The woman is charged with theft and misdemeanor for trespassing.

A woman was able to get past security and board a plane to one of the major airports. Fortunately at the next major airport, she was detained and charged for her crimes.

A woman who was wanted to some crime got past airport security and boarded an airplane at a major airport. She was picked up at the next major airport.

An elderly woman who either purposely sneaked past airport security or else is suffering from dementia and simply walked into the situation, boarded a plane unobserved. When the plane landed, the woman tried to get onto another plane, but was denied. She then figured out a way to get onto an international flight, where she was caught and returned to the United States. She faces charges of theft and trespassing.

An elderly woman somehow sneaked onto a plane unobserved. When the plane landed, she attempted to get onto another flight, but was denied. She managed to get onto an international flight somehow. She was caught and brought back to the US. She faces charges of theft and trespassing.

An elderly woman first stowed away in one plane, and attempted to sneak into another. She failed, but managed to secure a hiding spot within an international airplane, where she was later found and returned to the U.S., charged with theft and trespassing.

A woman was trying to sneak onto flights and avoiding camera's to hide her identity. She was initially thwarted but did manage to get past security and fly to Heathrow Airport.

A woman was trying to avoid cameras the best that she can. Eventually, she was able to get on the airport.

A woman was trying to avoid cameras as best she can. She was eventually able to get on the airport.

A woman was trying to avoid cameras as much as possible. Eventually she has able to get on the airport.