

Because of a routine check on a cargo vessel, the Indonesian police was able to prevent a smuggling attempt. They found about 150 exotic birds stuffed into plastic drain pipes that were sealed at each end by a wire. The animals were meant to be transported to the US, where they can be sold as pets. Officials assume that the operation was planned and executed by a wildlife trafficking ring. This delivery is worth approximately $250,000. Nearly one week after discovering the illegally captured birds, the police arrested four men who are allegedly responsible for this act. The suspects face up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $8000 if found guilty. However, the case rests on an anonymous tip which provides a very weak case and all four suspects still deny any connection to the smuggling affair. Thus, it is still not clear, whether they were involved, or not.

~~Numerous messages have been sent to Robin des Bois from Africa, Asia, Europe and the American continent. They come from Custom officers, CITES delegates, governmental institutions, Non-Governmental Organizations and from the general public. They all testify to the usefulness of "A la Trace" and the English version "On the Trail".~~
~~The closer that species with substances considered to be of value come to global or local extinction, the more the means to attack and to defend them turn murderous. The total of human mortality in this war on wildlife is increasing. Thefts of seizures, including from governmental safety vaults, are multiplying. These hold-ups yield, for those who organize them, more money than bank and cash transportation robberies.~~

During a routine check on a cargo vessel, the Indonesian police discovered 150 exotic birds cruelly stuffed into plastic drain pipes that were sealed at either end with wire meshing. It is thought that the animals were intended to be sold as pets in the US where the shipment as headed. Due to their timely action, the Indonesian police were able to thwart a smuggling attempt. The shipment was believed to have been worth at least $250,000. Nearly one week after this shocking discovery the police were able to capture four men thought responsible for the crime. They could face up to five years in prison and a fine of upto $8000 if found guilty. However, it should be mentioned that the case rests on an anonymous tip which led police to arrest the suspects. Therefore, it remains to be seen how much proof or evidence can be shown to link the suspects to the crime.
