

A professor in the Neuroscience department at Corsen University has been accused of sexual harassment. 11 women, all of them former graduate students in the department, have come forward with stories about Prof. Jim Smith. The list of allegations against Smith includes frequently commenting on women's appearance, forcing students to have meetings with him in his private home, and hosting several hot-tub parties that included nudity, which students were present at. Witnesses also claim that it was well-known that Smith engaged in a series of quid pro quo sexual relationships with his female graduate students. An independent investigation by an external law firm was commissioned. If found guilty of sexual harassment, Smith may be suspended for an indefinite amount of time or even fired, a rarity for tenured professors. The report by the official investigation is based on testimony about his character by over 100 of his current and former students, and indicates that Smith clearly showed a pattern of predatory behavior.
