

Since mid-April 2018, a region in Bavaria, Germany, has faced a series of fires set by one or more vandals that ignited trash cans, a car, and even an entire town house. At its peak, 8 different fires were started in a single night. Fortunately, nobody was hurt, but the material damages are estimated at around $450,000. The police could not make significant advances in finding the perpetrator until they publicly offered a reward of $6000 for each helpful tip. A crumpled-up black shirt found at one of the crime scenes and bearing a unique design may have been the critical clue. About a week ago, the police arrested a 37 year old suspect on charges of second-degree arson. According to recent reports, experts believe that the existing evidence leaves no doubt about his guilt.

There were some fires set in Bavaria, Germany. The local police were having trouble figuring out who caused the fires until they set up a $6000 reward for tips. The police then found a black shirt that led them to arrest the guilty individual. It is unclear whether they found the shirt because of the monetary reward or not.

Some fires, possibly arson, were set in Bavaria, Germany. Police had trouble finding any leads on the possible culprit until they put out a $6,000 reward for any tips. Afterwards, police found a black shirt that led to them finding and arresting the potential perpetrator of the fires. It is unclear whether the monetary reward for tips was the cause of this new development.

There was a fire in Bavaria Germany. Police put out a monetary prize for any tips on the case. They ended up finding a black shirt that led to the culprit. But, they don't know if the money helped them find the black shirt.

Following a man-made fire in Bavaria, Germany, a black shirt constituted sufficient evidence to lead the police to the arsonist guilty of causing it. However, it is unclear whether this finding was the result of the monetary prize that the police offered in exchange for evidence relating to the case.

After a man-made fire in Germany, a black shirt was enough evidence for the police to convict the arsonist. However, it is unclear whether this is a result of the police issuing a monetary reward for evidence regarding the case.

a 37 year old set fire to a town and there was alot of damage. they found him after further investigating

There was a fire set in the town, after investigating it was found to be a 57 year old man responsible

57 year old man set a fire in a town

In the last eight months, Bavaria has suffered a series of arson crimes whose damages stretch into the hundreds of thousands. They've now arrested a subject who they believe is guilty without a doubt.

Over the past few months, Bavaria a suffered a series of arson crimes, whose victims stretch into hundreds of thousands. The people of Bavaria believe they have found guilty the one responsible for these crimes.

Over the past few months, Bavaria has suffered a series of crimes, such as arson. They believe they found the suspects.

There have been lots of crimes in recent months in Bavaria and they think they have the suspects