

In late December 2017, a couple in Iowa was checking on their 50 beehives when they discovered a tragic scene. The hives had been overturned and hacked apart, and the equipment had been thrown out of the shed and smashed. This destruction caused the death of about half a million bees and approximately $60,000 in property damage. Nearly three weeks later, police arrested two boys (12 and 13 years old) who, allegedly, were responsible for the damage. The charges against them include criminal mischief, burglary, and offenses to an agricultural animal facility. Since they are still minors, they will be charged in juvenile court where they face up to 10 years in prison and fines of up to $10,000 if convicted. Police officials explained that the investigation is still in progress, but the evidence so far overwhelmingly speaks to the guilt of the suspects.

In late December 2017, a couple of Iowa were checking on their 50 beehives when they stumbled upon a tragic scene. All 50 beehives appeared to be smashed, along with the farm shed containing all their equipment, incurring a total of 50 million bee deaths and $60,000 in property damages. The police found two children (12 years and 13 years) potentially responsible for the crime. They will be tried in juvenile court. If found guilty they would be accused of burglary and damage to an animal farm, resulting in ten years of prison and a fine of $10,000. The evidence strongly points to the children being responsible for the damages.

In December 2017, two couples who operate a bee farm found their hives destroyed. Around 50 hives were smashed, their inhabitants dead. Millions of bees were killed, and the couple incurred 60000 dollars in damages. Two young children of ages 10-12 were suspected. If convicted, they will go to juvenile prison for up to 10 years for burglary and damaging property. Much of the evidence points to them being guilty.
