

A professor in the Neuroscience department at Corsen University has been accused of sexual harassment. 11 women, all of them former graduate students in the department, have come forward with stories about Prof. Jim Smith. The list of allegations against Smith includes frequently commenting on women's appearance, forcing students to have meetings with him in his private home, and hosting several hot-tub parties that included nudity, which students were present at. Witnesses also claim that it was well-known that Smith engaged in a series of quid pro quo sexual relationships with his female graduate students. An independent investigation by an external law firm was commissioned. If found guilty of sexual harassment, Smith may be suspended for an indefinite amount of time or even fired, a rarity for tenured professors. The report by the official investigation is based on testimony about his character by over 100 of his current and former students, and indicates that Smith clearly showed a pattern of predatory behavior.

A professor is suspected of sexual harassment. It has been reported by many of his graduate students and other peers. If found guilty, he would be asked to leave his position.

A professor is suspected of sexual harassment. It was been reported by graduate students and his peers. If found guilty, he would be asked to leave his position.

A professor is suspected of sexual harassment and he was reported by graduate students. If he is found guilty, he will have to leave his position.

Graduate student reported sexual assault from a professor. If the professor is convicted, he will lose his job.

Graduate students accused a professor of sexual assault and he will lose his job if he is found guilty.

A professor in the Neuroscience department at Corsen University has been arrested for sexual harassment. 11 women, all former graduate students, have come forward with allegations against Prof. Jim Smith. He faces charges of making inappropriate comments on women's appearances, making students come to his private home for meetings, and hosting several hot-tub parties that included nudity at which some of his student were present. Smith is also known to have had several quid pro quo relationships with some of his students. He has been suspended indefinitely and may even be fired, a rarity for professors with tenure. Over 100 people who know him have testified about his character.

A professor in the Neuroscience department at Corsen University has been suspended indefinitely and could be fired—a rarity for professors with tenure—based on charges of harassment. 11 women, all former graduate students, have come forward to accuse Prof. Jim Smith of misconduct. Smith was said to have made inappropriate comments about women's appearances, invited students to his private home for meetings, and hosted several hot-tub parties, which involved nudity and at which students were present. He was also accused of having had quid-pro-quo relationships with many students. Over 100 people will testify about Smith's character.

Professor is likely to lose tenure and get charged for harassment. 11 women have come forward to testify of sexually inappropriate behavior and harassment.

11 women have come forward to report sexually inappropriate behavior and harassment against a professor. As a result, this professor is likely to lose tenure and will likely be charged with harassment.

A woman has charged a professor with sexual harassment. The professor will most likely lose tenure.

Jim Smith, a professor of Neuroscience at Corsen University is being charged with sexual harassment. 11 women, all former graduate students, have come forward with allegations about him. These allegations include forced meetings at private homes, comments on female appearance, and hot tub parties which contain nudity. An investigation is based on the testimony of 100 colleges and acquaintances which relies on a history of inappropriate relationships with students. If found guilty, Prof Smith will be suspended indefinitely or perhaps fired.

Jim Smith, a professor of Neuroscience at Corsen University, is being tried for sexual harassment. 11 women, all former graduate students, have come forward with allegations. These allegations vary from private meetings at home to house parties with nudity to comments on female appearance. 100 colleges will offer evidence for the case. If found guilty, Smith risks losing his job and other things.

A man with the last name Smith is a professor of Neuroscience at a university and 11 females have come forward with stories of sexual assault. Their stories vary from private meetings and stories at parties.

Several women who are students of a neuroscience professor named Smith at a university have come forward with allegations of sexual assault, and say that these assaults took place during private meetings and parties.

Several women who were students of a neuroscience professor at an university have come forward with allegations of sexual assault. They say the assaults took place during parties and private meetings.