

In Indonesia, four men have been arrested for smuggling about 150 exotic birds which were meant to be transported to the Philippines. The police found the animals stuffed into plastic drain pipes that were sealed at each end by a wire. In the US, this delivery is worth approximately $250,000. Those exotic birds are often illegally sold as pets and are seen as status symbols. Nearly one week after discovering the illegally captured birds, the police had managed to track down four men who are allegedly responsible for this act. According to police officials they had several eyewitness accounts which led to the arrests. The suspects face up to five years in prison and an up to $8000 fine if found guilty. However, the case rests on an anonymous tip which provides a very weak case and all four suspects still deny any connection to the smuggling affair. Thus, a conviction seems unlikely.

Conviction seems unlikely since all evidence is an anonymous tip and eyewitness reports and all four men deny any involvement.

Four men have been arrested because suspected of trafficking exotic birds. There is no evidence against them, just the report of a tip made by an eyewitness, so they're unlikely to be convicted.

four men who were trying to smuggle in 150 were arrested. There is not a good chance of them being put in jail.

Four men are suspected of trafficking exotic birds. The evidence is just a eye witness which probably isn't enough.
